

main() knows all three: their names, argument and result types, and that they are available right now.

The wiring is written into the code itself — step 1.